

Questions about violence

The reason we ask these questions is because violence in close relationships affects how you feel both physically and mentally. It also affects the physical and mental health of your children. Children have the right to grow up in an environment free from violence. Violence can be cases when you have been a victim yourself or when you see someone else being harmed. You can get help and support if you are a victim of violence or if you have seen or heard violence against someone close to you while growing up. You can also get help and support if you have used violence against someone else.

By someone close to you, we mean a partner, family member, relative or some other important person in your life.

1. Have you been threatened, controlled, humiliated, harassed or similar by someone close to you?

Yes

No

2. Have you been restrained, pushed, punched, kicked or injured in some other way by someone close to you?

Yes

No

3. Have you felt pressured or forced into sexual acts by someone close to you?

Yes

No

4. As an adult, have you subjected someone else to the type of violence described in questions 1–3?

Yes

No

If there is anything else on your mind that you want to mention, please write it on the back.

Thank you for answering the questions!