

ComAlong online -

A support program on 1177 for parents and relatives of children with communication difficulties

Research have shown that the most positive thing for children's communication development is for the adults around them to use an empathetic and responsive communication style, and that they provide alternative and complementary ways of communicating, such as through visual supports and signs.

As a parent or a relative, you now have the opportunity to learn all these things in ComAlong online. You can find explanatory videos, examples from actual families and recorded conversations with both professionals and other parents. You can watch and listen through 1177 on your phone at your own pace and whenever you want.
